

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

April 25, 2026

ecoAmerica Releases Faith & Climate Film Series to Spark Action in Communities Across America

Washington, DC: People of faith are leading on climate in cities across America, and ecoAmerica is spreading the good news to inspire more Americans to do the same. Today, ecoAmerica's faith-based program Blessed Tomorrow released a new free Faith & Climate Film Series, inviting individuals and groups to watch, reflect, and take action through storytelling rooted in shared values.

The seven-part series, Caring for the Earth: Stories from Faith Communities, explores how a spectrum of spiritual traditions call on and show us to care for creation and one another. Each film features several faith communities leading with hope, compassion, and courage. The films are supported by a study and discussion guide, making it easy for groups and individuals to engage and take action.

"Stories move people in ways facts alone cannot," said Meighen Speiser, Executive Director, ecoAmerica. "This series brings forth hope through action, action rooted in faith, and an invitation for people to come together around shared values, wrapped in the beauty of people's indomitable spirit and great cinematography."

The Series Includes:

1. Tend and Keep: People of Faith Caring for the Earth — An introduction to more than 30 faith leaders across traditions and 14 states, sharing stories of hope, compassion, and courage.
2. Called by Faith: How Will You Answer? — Exploring the personal call to care for creation.
3. Seeds of Fire: Building Resilient Communities — Examining how communities respond to climate disasters and build resilience.
4. Holy Water: Protecting What Connects and Sustains Us — A look at water stewardship and conservation.
5. Climate Justice: Sacred Voices Rising — Highlighting leaders working at the intersection of climate and justice.

6. Healing Creation: Honoring Nature and Each Other — Focusing on restoration through biodiversity, conservation, and native practices.
7. Young Leaders: Creating Hope for the Future — Elevating youth leadership in climate action.

Access the Full Series for Free HERE

Through powerful storytelling and easy-to-use tools, the series invites connection, reflection, and shared purpose.

Interviews are available with the featured film participants and ecoAmerica leadership.

Media Contact: Press@ecoAmerica.org

About ecoAmerica

ecoAmerica is a nonprofit organization that moves society toward climate solutions by engaging and supporting trusted national institutions to inspire and empower their millions of members in local communities across America to visibly act and advocate for ambitious, just, climate mitigation, resilience, and restoration.

About Blessed Tomorrow

Blessed Tomorrow is ecoAmerica's faith-based program, equipping religious leaders and communities nationwide to lead on climate solutions.